

Student of the year 2022 Education Awards

Three Bradford students went head-to-head to win Star Student of the Year at the 2022 Education Awards sponsored by Bradford College. One of the students was our very own James Taylor-Howorth, from Oastlers School, who eventually won the prestigious Telegraph & Argus Student of the Year Award. Well done, James! And commiserations to the other two Bradford students: Ansharah Shahzad and Mohammed Owes Khan who also presented high standards of achievement. James Taylor-Howorth, 11, a pupil at Oastlers School, has impressed his teachers with his work but the youngster also just so happens to do a very good impression of Oliver Twist from the classic musical.

James said: "I've been working a lot harder at Maths and English. The teachers are really supportive."

His teacher said: "His attitude is amazing. He comes in every morning, beaming.

"He'll just sit down and crack on straight away."

James also seems to have a knack for getting into character when it comes to history and this rubs off on his fellow students.

His teacher added: "With history, if we're doing Victorians, he'll put on a little Victorian accent. He'll have this Oliver thing going on where he'll get up and act it out.

"He helps the class out and gets them involved."

One of his other teachers said: "He's always positive. He'd always got a smile on his face.

"It shows what type of person he is. He's a confident lad and very enthusiastic in what he does and what he achieves."
